Presented by Teachers of the Deaf and Specialist Speech and Language Therapists

Literacy skills begin at birth and continue into the early school years. As reading and writing become more formal in the primary years this skill poses more of a challenge for

This course aims to:

- Explain why deaf children are 'at risk' of literacy difficulties
- Explain how emergent literacy and early literacy develops
- Explore effective strategies and tips for book reading
- Help you to develop children's reading skills, encourage imaginative writing and extend vocabulary

This will be a full day of training given in two parts, with a lunch break to network, revolving around literacy for those working throughout early years and primary years to discuss and learn about these challenges and ways to support the children we work with. Please be aware lunch is not provided.

This course is suitable for everyone working with children who have a hearing loss in a mainstream setting

Please bring anonymised samples of mark-making or writing for the child you work with
