Everything you always wanted to know about using Visuals but were afraid to ask!

Outline

Why we need visuals/how they support learning, understanding and memory

How visuals can be adapted for individual, small group and whole classes

A range of visuals to support understanding instructions, listening behaviours, vocabulary, every routines etc

Opportunities for sharing ideas and resources

Description

This workshop will draw on the specialisms of autism, occupational therapy and language and communication, in learning and understanding how we can use visuals to support a range of needs at the whole class, small group and individual level. The workshop will be interactive and include some theoretical knowledge of how visuals can be useful in supporting children with executive functioning and physical needs/differences, but also how they are helpful in supporting learning, understanding and remembering for all students. The workshop will also demonstrate a range of visuals supports and how they can be used.

Outcome

You will have an understanding of the importance of using visuals across age ranges know how visuals support diverse learners in the classroom have a tool for thinking about where, when and how to use visuals to support diverse learners have access to a range of visual resources be able to implement what you have learned in the workshop back in your classroom
